Daughters of Penelope Takes Its Message to Capitol Hill

DOP National President Meets with Members of Congress; Cypriot Ambassador

WASHINGTON (October 15, 2007)—The Daughters of Penelope (DOP), a preeminent international women’s organization, embarked on its “Civic Responsibility Campaign” last week as Grand President Karen Stamatiades met with various members of Congress to create awareness of the organization’s role and charitable works within the community.

“This year, we are challenging our members to become more active in one of the core facets of our mission which is civic responsibility,” said Stamatiades. “Our message to Capitol Hill included this new initiative and our desire to become a more active voice on matters pertaining to the Greek American community and on women’s issues in general.”

Moreover, Stamatiades discussed DOP programs in the areas of senior housing, education and literacy, medical research, and domestic violence.

“We were very well received by the members of Congress,” added Stamatiades. “We look forward to working with them on all our issues as our Civic Responsibility initiative progresses throughout our administrative year.”

Meeting with Ambassador Kakouris
